Comment: With regards to whether all broadband recipients should have access to a minimum of speeds of 6 Mbps/1.5 Mbps, I fully agree that those speeds should be the legal minimum instead of the current requirement of speeds of 4 Mbps/1 Mbps. However, I think that within the next 5 years, as data usage increases, the legal minimum should be raised by 50% to accommodate the additional traffic.

Also, I strongly recommend that monthly minimum data cap not go below 100GB. While the majority of the population does not exceed that cap, it would put a strain on heavy users who require large amounts of data transfer for their livelihood.
